FOREWORD

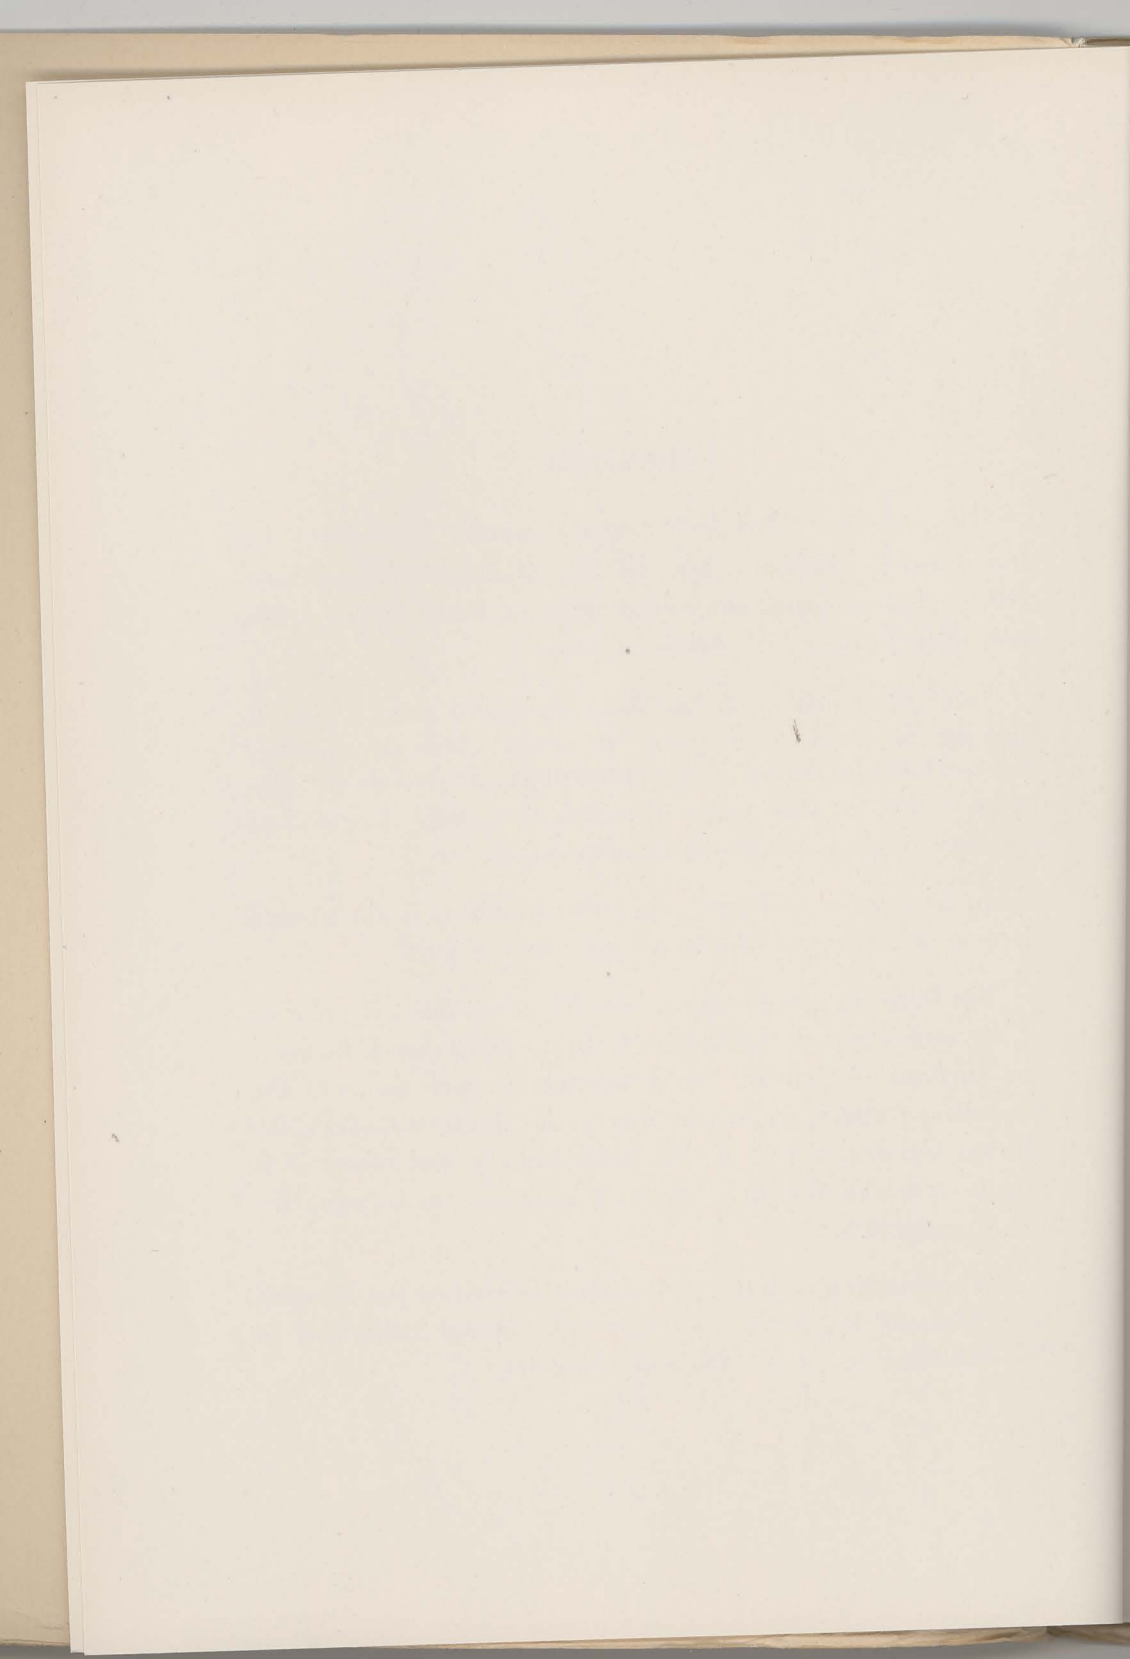

The two years which have elapsed since the last water color and drawing exhibition held by the Brooklyn Museum have witnessed a continued interest in these mediums by the artists and, we believe, by the public at large.

Our 1929 exhibition has been assembled with a view to showing the work of a group of artists whom we consider representative of many of the different artistic moods or viewpoints within the wide range of technical accomplishment characteristic of the modern schools of painting.

In accordance with our policy the exhibitors in the present show were not represented in the one given in 1927.

The Museum greatly appreciates the admirable co-operation of the artists and to the Ainslie Gallery, the Babcock Gallery, the Dudensing Gallery, the Frederick Keppel Gallery, the Kraushaar Gallery, the Milch Gallery, the Montross Gallery, the Morton Gallery, the F. K. M. Rehn Gallery and others it is greatly indebted for their generous assistance in forming the list of exhibitors.

In conjunction with the Water Color Exhibition the Museum takes pleasure in showing the Eleventh Annual Exhibition of The Brooklyn Society of Miniature Painters.
